Tourism for peace & co-existence

Travel from one country to another is a way of discovering a new land, new culture, sometimes a new environment, enabling people to explore and learn from each other. Peaceful co-existence, respecting others is a trait that needs to be cultivated among human beings from young age, this message should be spread worldwide, as we celebrate UN Tourism Day on 27 September 2024.

Dr Shehara Rizly

When people live together respecting each other's culture, traditions, and customs, it automatically paves way for peaceful co-existence. For example, in the United Arab Emirates, there are people from more than 200 nationalities living together in peace. However, the Middle East has been in conflicts with different countries at different times over the past many years, but tourism has proved to be a key game-changer. Today, you will witness more countries looking at tourism not just to drive their economy but also for people or tourists to learn about themselves and go forward in life. Tourism is one of the most powerful tools to promote peace and co-existence. It certainly helps people understand each other, provides economic stability which becomes a safety net or safe haven, fosters respect for other individuals and ensures that the environment is also well maintained as they look forward in life. Key industry leaders share their views on this with “Travel & Tourism: A Force for Peace and Understanding. Travel & Tourism is a powerful force for global peace and understanding. As they say travel broadens the mind, fostering respect for different cultures. During natural disasters and conflict our sector keeps air routes, and hotels open. Economic growth lifts people out of poverty and provides work to millions. Today, as we celebrate World Tourism Day, let's harness the transformative power of travel to build a more peaceful, interconnected world.”

NDC: Future of experiences

IATA has developed a 'New Distribution Capability' to modernise the way airfares and related services are distributed to travel agents. Airlines and travel agents are working together to enable this service.

“For Emirates, NDC has enabled us to modernise distribution and expand our reach in the travel trade retail community to provide our partners with access to high-quality, enriched content, more dynamic offers and ancillary options. We are also committed to working with our trade partners to offer more choice and personalisation for our customers by providing them access to exclusive products and services via NDC. All Emirates products and services sold through NDC fall under associated norms set by the airline. Existing legacy distribution systems had a number of limitations, but with NDC systems like Emirates Gateway, we have evolved this technology in line with consumer expectations.”

“NDC allows travel agents to access richer content from airlines, this is more beneficial for the airlines who are going to save huge cost on distribution channel. As direct sell they will be able to control the inventory making it favourable to those having access to NDC content. This will also give opportunities to agency to earn more incentives. “NDC is an IATA standard (distribution channel) that allows travel agents to have dynamic access to the airline products. It has no expiration date, and its policies are mostly set by individual contracts rather than being governed by industry-wide standards. Pros: Rich content, real-time data, personalized offers, increased revenue Cons: Implementation costs, operational issues, Variable adoption, and limited client data management. Cancellations are easier.”

“The New Distribution Capability is a programme crafted by the IATA and has taken centre stage among the latest trends and technologies to modernise the distribution of air travel products. It provides detailed and personalised booking experience for travellers by offering competitive fares, ancillary services, such as seat upgrade, excess baggage, and onboard Wi-Fi, meals, which helps GDSs, OTAs, and other distributors to deliver good offers.”

IATA had set a deadline of achieving NDC capability for all airlines by 2025. NDC is a travel industry standard for the distribution and retailing of flight content. NDC is not a system, database, or piece of software - it is a standard for exchanging data. There is no policy and expiry. NDC is entirely dependent on what the airlines provide.”

“We are actively pursuing the integration of NDC, which will make a significant difference to the way our products are retailed to travel agents, TMCs, and other travellers, once implemented. It would enable our “NDC is indeed transforming the travel industry by allowing airlines to offer more personalized and dynamic pricing and services and many more benefits. Air France - KLM have been a leader in adopting NDC, and they use it to enhance their offerings. By leveraging NDC, Air France - KLM is not just improving its distribution capabilities but also creating a more personalised travel experience. Air India launches branded fares Vistara's integration into Air India will catapult the Air India group to a 300+ aircraft powerhouse by the end of this year, solidifying their position as a major player, says Kaizad Postwalla, Head of International Sales - North America and GMEA at Air India. Postwalla had been with the Singapore Airlines Group for over 20 years and initially managed corporate sales for the India team at Singapore Airlines.

TT Bureau

What are the key highlights of the merger?

Vistara's integration into Air India will catapult the Air India group to a 300+ aircraft powerhouse by the end of this year, solidifying our position as a major player. With the implementation of the merger, customers of Air India and Vistara will have more options and greater choice across the combined airline's robust worldwide route network. This means more flight options, the choice of more convenient times, and flights to more new destinations, in India and across the world. With a new aircraft arriving every six days from Air India's orders with Airbus and Boeing for 470 aircraft, the combined airline will have one of the most modern and efficient fleets in the industry with world-class products and an enhanced travel experience.

Kaizad Postwalla
Head of International Sales - North America and GMEA at Air India

What are the new offerings for agents?

After the success of branded fare families on domestic routes, we introduced the menu-based pricing model on international routes as well. The fare families are designed to let our guests choose the kind of fare and services that best suit their requirement, given that travellers today have varied preferences, and a one-size-fits-all approach is no longer ideal. Another key development is our work on the codeshare partnership with Air India Express. This will enable our travel agent partners to use Air India document to cover both Air India and Air India Express sectors through GDS. We also have a codeshare agreement and Special Prorate Agreement (SPA) with Vistara, which enables Air India flights to be sold on international routes paired with Vistara's domestic sectors. These initiatives are designed to

The fare families are designed to let guests choose the kind of fare and services that best suit their requirements, as travellers have varied preferences significantly expand the network available to our agents, providing them with more options to sell, not just within/ to/ from India, but also beyond. We are particularly focused on promoting International-to-International connectivity and look forward to the support of our travel partners in the Gulf to grow the segment as we continue to expand our route network globally.

Could you share further plans?

We have significantly expanded our route network over the last two years as we added more than 40 new aircraft to Air India's fleet, including the brand-new Airbus A350s. The A350s started operating to Dubai earlier this year and will now be deployed on the Delhi-London Heathrow route next month, followed by Delhi-New York JFK in November. Our codeshare with Air India Express also opens up a much wider network. It won't just be point-to-point (P2P) connections anymore, but an expanded network from international to domestic (I2D).

On-time, Saudia retains top position

On July 19, the aviation industry was thrown into disarray by a global IT outage stemming from a CrowdStrike and Microsoft software update error. The disruption resulted in the cancellation of over 5,000 flights worldwide, with thousands more delayed. Latin America and the Middle East & Africa experienced minimal impact. These disruptions were evident in the notable decreases in OTP scores.

Saudia (SV) retained its position as the global leader in July with an On-Time Performance (OTP) of 88.15 per cent, just a slight decline from last month's performance of 88.22 per cent. While some airlines at King Khalid International Airport (RUH) were disrupted by the global IT outage on July 19, Saudi officials reported that operations continued as the airport used an alternative system. The airport secured third place in the Global Airports category with an OTP of 83.27 per cent, down by more than 2 points from June's OTP of 85.60 per cent.

Similar to Latin America, the CrowdStrike outage had less impact in the Middle East and Africa region. Affected airlines and airports were able to quickly resolve the situation and return to normal operations by using an alternative system for the check-in processes. The region saw an 8 per cent decrease in flight cancellation with only 1,849 recorded compared to 2,000 last month. Safair (FA) maintained its position as the regional leader this month with an OTP of 93.57

Agents must evolve with technology

Travel Agents today need to be more dynamic than before, especially as technology has become part and parcel of the industry. Efficiency, being proactive, staying ahead in the game whilst ensuring that you stay relevant to what is required at present given time, times have definitely changed than before, says Geoffrey Salatan, Owner, Geof Travel, in a conversation with TRAVELTALK.

TT Bureau

What are the main changes experienced by travel advisors these days?

In today's dynamic travel industry, travel agents find themselves navigating a landscape shaped by technological advancements, changing consumer preferences, and a market increasingly driven by price sensitivity.

How does an advisor stay relevant and efficient?

Competition among travel agents has intensified in recent years, spurred by the rise of online booking platforms and the widespread access to travel information. With travellers increasingly turning to the internet to research and book their trips, agents must differentiate themselves to attract and retain clients. Providing personalised service, expertise, and

Do you see the digital landscape helping the travel trade?

The proliferation of online booking platforms has reshaped the way travellers plan and book their trips. With just a few clicks, travellers can compare prices, read reviews, and make reservations, bypassing the traditional role of the travel agent. To compete in this digital landscape, agents must leverage technology to enhance the booking experience and provide added value to their clients.

In a price sensitive era, how do the agents make their profits?

Operating in a price-sensitive market poses unique challenges for travel agents. With travellers increasingly price-conscious, agents must strike a balance

Finally, what are the key elements for agents to be unique?

The role of travel agents is evolving in response to technological advancements and changing consumer preferences. While competition is fierce and the market is price-sensitive, there are ample opportunities for agents to succeed by providing personalised service, leveraging technology, and demonstrating their value to clients. Tourism vital to promoting peace

Basmah Al-Mayman
Regional Director for the Middle East, UN Tourism

“The pursuit of peace is a continuing endeavour, and its progress through tourism diplomacy is more relevant than ever. Tourism can play a vital role as a catalyst for fostering peace and understanding between nations and cultures and in supporting reconciliation, tolerance, and acknowledgement of the rights of others. Reflecting the harmonious correlation between Tourism and Peace, tourism flourishes where peace prevails, and peace is promoted.”

Why hotels need data for pricing strategy?

Setting the right room rates, at right time, to attract the right guests and maximise revenue can feel like an impossible task. The ongoing manual calculations and pricing updates across all the distribution channels are huge headaches to most hoteliers, especially if pricing is not your only responsibility. TRAVELTALK spoke with Marvin Speh, Co-Founder & COO, RoomPriceGenie, makes it easy for you.

Why should hoteliers set business objectives for their property? How should they go about setting their business objectives?

Setting business objectives helps hoteliers establish more effective pricing strategies and gives them a way to monitor the results, in a quantifiable way, that will make it more clear where and how you can maximise your bookings and revenue opportunities. Now, let's talk about the how for hotels setting business objectives involves establishing short and long-term goals related to key metrics.

STEP 1: Assess how much revenue your property is making and the current occupancy levels. Compare these figures with those from the previous year to identify areas for improvement. Key metrics to focus on include Revenue per Available Room (RevPAR), which combines occupancy and ADR to give a comprehensive view of performance and reflect how well you are using your available inventory.

STEP 2: Set specific targets for total revenue, ADR, and RevPAR based on past performance.

STEP 3: Regularly track these metrics to stay on course and adjust strategies as needed to optimise revenue and occupancy.

How can hoteliers use data to improve their pricing strategy?

In revenue management, leveraging data is crucial to developing effective pricing strategies. Knowledge derived from data empowers hoteliers to make smarter decisions more quickly and improve overall performance. Here are tips for how hoteliers should be using data to optimise their pricing strategies:

TIP 1: Learn from the past

Use reports from your Property Management System (PMS) to analyse historical data. This can help you understand past performance and make informed decisions about future pricing. For example, if your booking report reveals a high volume of deeply discounted rates through an OTA channel well in advance, it may indicate that you are allocating too much inventory to that channel. Adjusting your distribution accordingly will help you maximise revenue closer to the booking date.

TIP 2: Booking window insights

Pay close attention to your booking window. If you notice that deeply discounted rooms are being booked far in advance (90 days out) while your typical booking window is only 14 days, it suggests you might be offering discounts prematurely.

TIP 3: Understand the market segments that are most interested in booking with your property.

It's important to understand the type of guests who book at your property, most frequently and act accordingly. D

Digitalisation driving hospitality revenue

The UAE hospitality market, going through digital transformation, is expected to reach over US $9 billion by 2029. The process is enhancing the quality of service provided to service users, while also driving efficiencies in business operations. While the COVID-19 pandemic accelerated digital transformation through necessity, the tourism industry must continue to reap the rewards of ongoing digital transformation.

The recent global IT outage served as a stark reminder of the extent to which technology is embedded within critical hospitality and tourism industry systems, although the benefits derived by industry stakeholders from continuing digitalisation continue to increase. Digitalisation typically refers to the integration of digital technologies into everyday activities. In the hospitality industry, this includes a wide range of technologies, including online booking systems, Customer Relationship Management (CRM) software, mobile apps, Artificial Intelligence (AI), and the Internet of Things (IoT). These technologies are fundamentally altering how hospitality businesses operate, interact with customers, and generate revenue.

Historically, booking travel services, including tickets and accommodation, required physical visits to service provider offices. This process was often time-consuming. However, the integration of advanced technology within the hospitality industry has fundamentally altered these practices by enabling online bookings and streamlining the booking process. Digitalisation has enabled the incorporation of dynamic pricing which can benefit both parties in an exchange. The rapid shift towards increased digitalisation is characterised by the widespread adoption of digital transactions and mobile applications, which have become critical in driving market growth. IoT has seamlessly integrated into daily life and supports the hotel experience guests may have. The increased use of smartphones has facilitated the development and use of various applications for online travel bookings, and leisure payments, check-in applications with real-time updates, and even added convenience through QR code-sourced digital menus.

Moreover, hotel revenue management has become increasingly intricate and crucial in the era of digital transformation. As competition escalates and guest expectations evolve, hotels are embracing new technologies and data-driven approaches to optimise pricing, boost revenues, and provide personalised and offline channels, comprehensive revenue management is critical for managing availability and rates across all distribution points. Such data-driven insights can support more efficient management of hospitality venues.

In the digital age, there are new opportunities as well as challenges. Managing availability and rates consistently becomes more complex due to distribution fragmentation across multiple booking platforms. Furthermore, there is a need for enhanced capabilities and innovative solutions to meet evolving guest expectations for a more personalised and seamless experience. Thus, hotels must invest in their talent and continuous professional development culture to develop essential digital skills.

The rapid shift towards increased digitalisation is characterised by the widespread adoption of digital transactions and mobile applications experiences through maintaining information digitally on specific customer preferences shared across multiple visits and brand locations (e.g. room preferences, dietary requirements). Given the fluctuating demand patterns, precise forecasting and dynamic pricing are essential. With guests booking through various online platforms, businesses need to prioritise data security and comply with privacy regulations, as they handle large amounts of personal information. In the tourism sector, where data naturally transcends national borders, it is particularly important that data protection policies are carefully reviewed, and regulations ad-

Branded residences to launch @FHS

Branded residences, one of the fastest-growing sectors in hospitality, will take centre stage at FHS World, with a full-day conference led by one of the sector's leading innovators, Accor One Living. Debuting at FHS World on 2 October, The Branded Residences Forum will feature workshops and conference sessions exploring the sector's rapid growth in the Middle East and across the world.

Savills data shows that the Middle East, which is rapidly emerging as a global hub for the hospitality sector, currently has 45,000 residential units in 200 branded developments across 80 brands. With a staggering 500 per cent increase in branded residences in the last decade – from 10 in 2014 to 50 in 2023 with another 50 in the pipeline – Dubai is the most active market worldwide and now rivals Miami, New York and London as a world leader in branded residential development. Saudi Arabia is also seeing significant growth, with a 65 per cent surge in its branded development pipeline between 2022 and 2023. The Middle East and Africa currently accounts for 19 per cent of the global branded residences existing and pipeline project network; Europe represents 16 per cent; Asia Pacific 22 per cent and

Rising beyond luxury and lifestyle, branded residences are expanding into premium and Zhann Jochinke, Director - Market Intelligence and Research, Cavendish Maxwell, said: "Hotels continue to be a popular choice for short-stay vacations, but demand for more personalised, flexible accommodation is on the increase. With branded residences, clients enjoy enhanced privacy and space in a home-from-home environment with world-class amenities. For investors, branded residences potentially offer increased revenue and stability compared to traditional hotels as they provide long-term rental income, capital appreciation and additional revenue streams."

Ali Manzoor, Head of Hospitality, Hotels & Tourism, CBRE Middle East Region, said, "Given the unprecedented scale of hotel development across the region, demand in the construction sector has undoubtedly outstripped supply. As a result, development costs have been steadily increasing, which is attributable in part to the escalating cost of raw materials but more poignantly due to capacity constraints." ➔

Oman hosts four-city India roadshow

With Oman continuing to strengthen its position as a top-tier global destination for travellers, it recently organised a four-city India roadshow to showcase the sultanate's allure as a premier destination for Indian travellers seeking luxury, culture, and adventure. The destination's ongoing partnership with Indian travel agents and the strategic initiatives are poised to attract more visitors from India.

The Sultanate of Oman recently organised its four-city India roadshow to showcase the country's allure as a premier destination for Indian travellers seeking luxury, culture, and adventure. The roadshow, covering New Delhi, Mumbai, Chennai, and Bengaluru, highlighted Oman's growing appeal for the Indian tourism market.

Emphasising on the significance of Indian market for Oman's tourism sector, His Excellency Azzan Al Busaidi, Undersecretary of Tourism for the Ministry of Heritage and Tourism, Sultanate of Oman, said, "India ranks as Oman's second-largest source market."

The statistics underscore this importance: Indian visitor numbers to Oman surged past 625,000 in 2023, reflecting a remarkable growth of over 70 per cent from the previous year. This upward trend shows no signs of slowing, with a 15 per cent increase in arrivals recorded in the first five months of 2024 alone.

H.E. Al Busaidi attributed this growth to a combination of factors, including the success of the recent roadshows and the invaluable support from Indian travel agents. "The numbers we are seeing right now show a significant increase in inbound tourists from India to Oman. I believe, this is due to many factors, but foremost among them are the roadshows and other activities that Oman Tourism is conducting here in India," he noted.

He expressed optimism about continued growth, saying, "I believe, in the next phase, the numbers are expected to grow even further."

In 2023, Oman welcomed 4 million inbound tourists, with over 600,000 coming from India—a significant rise from 350,000 the previous year. H.E. Al Busaidi anticipates even higher numbers for this year, with 265,000 Indian travellers already recorded in the first five months. "If this pace continues, I am confident we will surpass last year's numbers. To further increase this figure, which is our objective, we need to conduct more roadshows, campaigns, and raise market awareness. We also require support not only from our market-based representatives here in India but also from Indian travel agents, who play a key role in achieving these goals," he said.

Oman is also taking strides in creating an attractive investment environment. Seeking Indian investments in the tourism sector,

H.E. Al Busaidi said, "We welcome Indian investments in the tourism sector in various forms. Several incentives will be provided, including long-term land leases at minimal charges, tax incentives, and other financial and non-financial benefits to encourage more investments from India in Oman's tourism sector. I believe, these investments will not only increase the number of tourists from Oman to India but also vice versa." 📌 sector continues to demonstrate its robust growth potential and attractive proposition for global travellers. With its sustained growth, Dubai is setting the standard for cities worldwide, in line with the objective of the Dubai Economic Agenda D33 to establish Dubai as one of the world's top urban economies."

Global accolades

The rise in international visits during H1 2024 is the result of citywide strategies established across key tourism pillars, created and implemented in partnership with stakeholders across the public and private sectors. Beyond the growth demonstrated through the performance, these efforts also yielded international recognition. Starting 2024 on a high note, Dubai was named the No.1 global destination for an unprecedented third successive year in the Tripadvisor Travellers' Choice Awards in January, making it the first city to achieve this unique accolade. The first half of the year also saw Dubai named the Middle East's leading destination by the World Travel Awards, while Dubai International Airport and Mina Rashid were named the Middle East's leading airport and leading cruise port for 2024 respectively.

His Excellency Helal Saeed Almarri, Director General, Department of Economy and Tourism (DET), Dubai, said: "The significant increase in visitor numbers in the first half of 2024 reflects the vision and leadership of His Highness Sheikh Mohammed bin Rashid Al Maktoum, Vice President and Prime Minister of the UAE and Ruler of Dubai, and aligns with the D33 Agenda's objective to make Dubai the world's best city to visit, live, and work in. This robust performance, reinforced by global recognition, validates the ambition and agility driving Dubai's tourism and wider economy. Our success stems from a diversified market approach, strong public-private partnerships, liberal visa policies, and alternative growth pathways, all catalysts for the continued surge in both leisure and business travel, along with increasing AIUla is an ancient desert oasis located in North-West Saudi Arabia with more than 200,000 years of recorded human history and ancient heritage sites with 7,000 years of successive civilisations. The AIUla Manara Observatory is part of an ambitious plan to develop AIUla into a premier destination with a focus on sustainability, community, and cultural and knowledge enrichment.

Langham Hospitality Group, a leader in luxury hospitality, will be venturing into the Middle East with its first property slated to open in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia. With 32 hotels around the globe, the group operates a portfolio of luxury hotels and resorts under the Langham, Cordis, and Eaton brands. Bob van den Oord, CEO, Langham Hospitality, shares with TRAVELTALK their plans for the region.

The Middle East is an important market for Langham, especially because there are many guests travelling to their key hotels in the gateway cities, such as London, New York, Los Angeles, Chicago, Hong Kong, Shanghai and Sydney. Langham currently has 32 hotels around the world, four brands over four continents. Langham Hotels is positioned at the luxury end of the market, Cordis is their upscale brand where when you check into a Cordis hotel you check into the local neighbourhood, they say, then Eaton is their lifestyle brand and finally the recently introduced Yingn'Flo brand is mid-tier brand growing predominantly in China. The biggest news for discerning guests from the Middle East is that the first Langham will be opening in Riyadh, Saudi Arabia.

Malaysia welcomes 165k GCC visitors

Last year, Malaysia welcomed 164,568 visitors from the GCC region, representing a substantial increase of 85.88 per cent compared to 88,534 tourists in 2022. In an interview with TT Bureau, Nuwal Fadhilah Ku Azmi, Director International Promotion Division, North and East Asia, Tourism Malaysia, shared that they expect that the number of tourists from the GCC region would double this year.

TT Bureau

How has Malaysia tourism been performing this year in terms of visitor numbers? Could you give us a breakdown? How has it been from ME?

In mid-2024, Malaysia's tourism sector showed strong recovery and growth in tourist numbers compared to previous years. Malaysia experienced a significant increase in international arrivals in 2024, with a 28.9 per cent growth from January to June compared to the same period in 2023. Specifically, the West Asia market saw a rise from 56,592 tourists in the first half of 2023 to 85,559 tourists in 2024, an increase of 51.2 per cent.

What are the new strategies to attract visitors from the ME? Do you have any set target in terms of the visitor numbers?

Malaysia has been actively refining its strategies to attract visitors from the West Asian market. Tourism Malaysia will continue to collaborate with national carriers and foreign airlines through the Charter Flight Matching Grant (GSPC) to increase air traffic from the West Asian market to Malaysia. As of now, the number of flights for the year 2024 is 138 per week with a seating capacity of 41,956 from the UAE, Kingdom of Saudi Arabia, Qatar, and Oman. Leveraging air connectivity to increase arrivals to Malaysia and rejuvenating offerings will further enhance Malaysia's appeal as a preferred tourist destination in this region. Tourism Malaysia and Emirates signed a Memorandum of Collaboration (MoC) for a joint promotion campaign at the Arabian Travel Market 2024.

In general, our marketing approach for 2024 is geared towards high-impact and fast conversion strategies by intensifying the business-to-business programme, especially for the Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) market. Last year, Malaysia welcomed 164,568 tourists from the region, representing a substantial increase of 85.88 per cent compared to 88,534 tourists in 2022. Therefore, we are optimistic that the arrivals from this region will increase by 100 per cent compared to last year.

As we gear up for Visit Malaysia 2026, Tourism Malaysia also plans to collaborate with other Middle Eastern airlines, including Qatar Airways.

Are they new connections to the Middle East? How will this drive traffic?

Batik Air has launched a new route starting from November 10, 2023, with flights from Dubai to Kuala Lumpur four times a week, offering a total flight capacity of 648 seats weekly. Responding to increased demand, Oman Air has doubled its flights to Kuala Lumpur from four times a week to eight times a week for the summer season. This year Emirates and Tourism Malaysia worked together to promote tourism and boost visitor traffic into Malaysia from the airline's global network. Last year, Emirates and Batik Air Malaysia launched a codeshare agreement, allowing Emirates' demand for travel between Malaysia and the Middle East.

Will you be looking at any joint promotions with the Travel Agents Association of Malaysia and the ME travel agents?

Joint promotions between Malaysian and Middle Eastern travel agents play a crucial role in increasing tourism and attracting more tourists. These partnerships enable collaborative marketing efforts and provide mutual benefits. Establishing strategic alliances with travel industry players through Joint Promotion (JP) and targeted campaigns with travel agents and leading tour operators in West Asia will align with the goals of Visit Malaysia 2026, which emphasises high-impact and fast conversion strategies. It is important to form partnerships involving both private and public sectors in order to offer new packages and improved service quality. ➔

weekly. Additionally, Flydubai commenced its flights on 10 February 2024 from Dubai to Penang and Langkawi, also operating four times a week, with a flight capacity of 664 seats customers to easily access five domestic Malaysian cities and three regional Southeast Asia points via Kuala Lumpur. These new routes and increased frequencies highlight the strong
